My Passion for Photography – Will Cheung FRPS

Will has been involved in photography magazines, editing several leading titles over a period of 30 years and is currently editor of Photography News. He has been taking pictures for even longer. Will prefers to enjoy a broad range of subject matter "I don't label myself, I'm a photographer, pure and simple, who just loves taking pictures," he explains. "For me, it's that straightforward and all I do is give myself as many reasons as I can to get me out with the camera"

These reasons come in the form of self imposed projects, usually without any time limit.

"They can last a day, a few weekends or several years - or until I get bored."

Currently, Will has ongoing projects on London's DLR railway and the Appleby Horse Fair but other themes include brollies, phone and camera users. His talk goes into his photographic philosophy and features a wide range of his project work, old and new, from street and portraits to urban and landscape, covering a variety of different approaches.

It is sure to inspire everyone keen on photography
